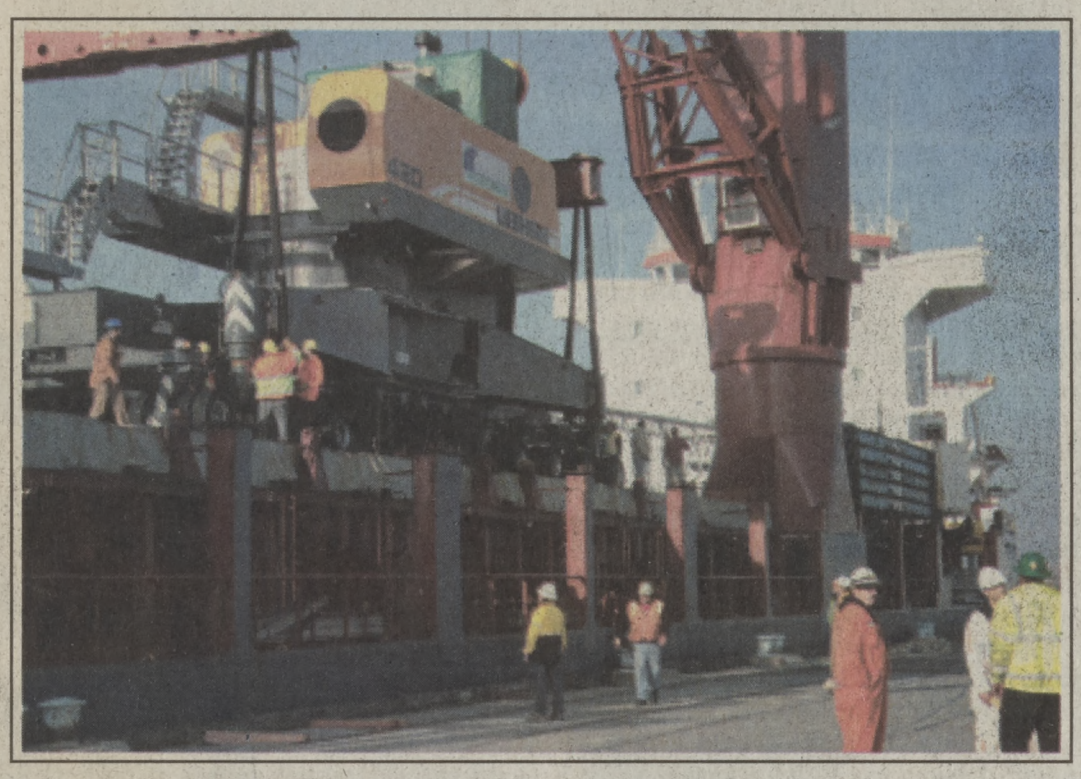
$5 million crane arrives at Port after 8,000-mile trip

ABOVE: the superstructure of the 'Ocean Titan' cargo ship is visible as the ship glides past the Bridgeway Lakes neighborhood on the shipping canal on Monday, on its way to the Port of West Sacramento. The crane is visible right of center (it's mostly orange in color).



The orange and green base of the Port's new crane sits on deck before unloading yesterday. When assembled, the crane will be over 100 feet tall and will lift up to 273,000 pounds. It was built in Austria and shipped from Germany, through the Panama Canal. (News-Ledger photos)

The Port of West Sacramento received a new, $5 million crane yesterday. The crane is meant to help the port in its new foray into container-handling. The port is part of a new "Northern California Marine Highway container barging operation, along with the ports of Oakland and Stockton. The new service is set to launch in late 2012.

Redevelopment agency appears done

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento's redevelopment agency – one of the most frequently used tools in the city's toolbox for promoting growth – will probably close up shop this year.

The California Supreme Court ruled last week that the state is within its rights to abolish local redevelopment agencies. Although the court ruled that a second part of the state's plan – forcing the agencies to make optional "pay to play" payments for the right to continue to exist – was not legal, the ruling does not appear enough to keep the agencies in business.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon told the News-Ledger this week that this city has been preparing for just this kind of decision – by trying to protect the local agency's assets from "fire sale," and by looking for new tools West Sacramento might use to fill the gap left behind by redevelopment.

"We have the good fortune related to other cities that we were already moving in this direction (when the court decision came out)," said Cabaldon. "99 percent of the other redevelopment agencies in the state are just now grappling with this, and saying 'what now?'"

Governor Brown signed law shutting down redevelopment agencies as part of an effort to balance the state budget. Part of the law requires local agencies to sell off any property they own and distribute the proceeds to local government districts. That's been scary for West Sacramento, said Cabaldon, because the local redevelopment agency owned almost 300 properties. Some of those are just small pieces of land, he said, but they might be earmarked for use, for example, in a future road project.

The city has been trying to do the best it can to protect its interests with these properties, he said. It has sold an "option to buy" 200 acres of land near Stone Lock to the Port of West Sacramento (which the city controls). That's an attempt to keep the land from being sold at "fire sale."

And it has tried to protect other pieces of real estate by transferring them or putting restrictions on their use.

"That way, even if the land is disposed of through a fire sale, it still has rules and covenants saying 'this property has to be used for a certain public use.'"

Still, a speculator might pick up one of these properties when it's sold, he said, and could be able to drive a hard bargain if the city needs to buy it back for a road project or similar public use.

Cabaldon appointed a commission – led by Councilman Chris Ledesma – to look for ways to promote development in the future, when redevelopment law is not available. The port may come in handy, he said.

"The port district has several powers and authorities that the redevelopment agencies have," said Cabaldon. It can issue revenue bonds and assemble property parcels, he said, and "the mission of the port is fairly broad in terms of economic development – it's not just about maritime commerce."

The port can't, though, fill the main hole left by redevelopment law – the ability to use expected future property taxes as collateral for big, up-front development work that makes way for growth.

"It can't solve the basic issues of tax increment financing," said the mayor.

State legislators have vowed to create new ways to let cities and counties pursue growth – but Cabaldon said isn't optimistic that they'll come up with anything as useful as a redevelopment agency.

EXTRICATION EDUCATION: All three shifts of West Sacramento firefighters had a chance last month to practice on "multiple scenarios" to "effect rescue of a trapped person." The crews used hydraulic tools to free up hypothetical crash victims. The training was conducted at Dollar Tow -- which donated the cars (courtesy of W.S.F.D.)

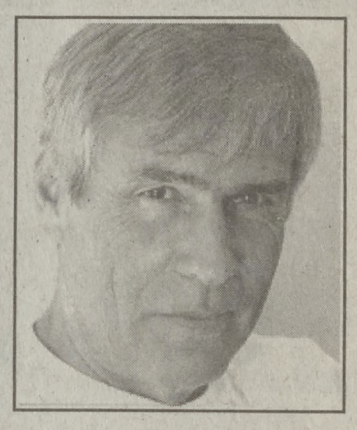
My unhealthy interest in the Black Death

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Well, another Christmas has come and gone, but unfortunately, when you get to be my age, Santa Claus is no longer the lovable gift-giver he used to be. He still looks pretty much the same, with his big belly, fluffy white beard and wind-chilled pink cheeks, but for me, the magical black bag which is always slung over his sturdy shoulder at this time of year has sadly changed forever. And why is that, you ask? Well, to be brutally honest about it, it's because for the past few decades or so, most of the really good stuff in Santa's bag never gets wrapped up and handed over to me.

Gone are the days when I used to wait with uncontrollable excitement for Santa to bring me a Davey Crockett coonskin hat, or a pair of Roy Rogers six-shooters, or a shiny new dump truck. Nor do I any longer hold my breath in expectation of a Lone Ranger mask, or a Willie Mays autographed baseball glove, or the best possible Christmas gift of all – a brand new shiny bicycle. No, I'm afraid when it comes to Santa Claus and his wonderful bag of goodies, growing up just ain't what it's cracked up to be.

Anyway, as the years have worn on, I have counted my blessings and quietly resigned myself to receiving socks, ties, shirts, and other kinds of "clothes" for Christmas. This year, however, I did drop a few hints that I wouldn't mind seeing a really interesting new book to read in my holiday stocking, and my daughter came through, big time.

The name of the book is "Galileo's Daughter," by Dava Sobel, and it recounts the lives of the famous 17th century scientist and founder of modern physics and his loving daughter, Sister Maria Celestre Galilei, who spent her entire adult life as a cloistered nun in a small Italian village.

"I knew you would enjoy that book," my daughter said after I told her I could hardly put it down once I began reading it.

"How did you know I would like it so much?" I asked her with interest.

"Because it's got a bunch of stuff in there about the Black Death," she replied with a smile, knowing that I have always been fascinated by the history of the Bubonic Plague, which was once the most feared disease known to man. (From 1346 through 1349 alone, it claimed 25 million lives, or roughly one-third of the population of Europe, North.Africa and the Middle East.)

"So, I take it you read the book before you put it in my Christmas stocking?" I asked my daughter.

"I mostly just read the letters Galileo's daughter wrote to her father from her convent. I can't believe how nuns used to live back then, sleeping on hard boards, continually fasting, going barefoot and always wearing the same exact brown robes – and even pulling their own teeth when they had a really bad toothache."

"But did you read the part about how the first symptoms of the Black Death were large, painful, pus-filled lumps, called buboes, which gave the disease its name – the Bubonic Plague? Or how the doctors back then would cut open the buboes, suck out the blood, and put leeches on them?"

"Yuck!"

"And listen to this," I said to my daughter, opening the book up to one of my favorite passages, `Prevailing treatment for the Black Death included bloodletting, crystals of arsenic applied to the wrists and temples, small sacks of precious stones laid over the heart, placing a quartered pigeon or a plucked rooster on the buboes, and unguents made by cooking animal excrement together with mustard, crushed glass, turpentine, poison ivy, and an onion."

"That's disgusting, Dad!"

"Actually," I said, warming to the subject, "medieval and Renaissance medical theory was really quite interesting. It was based on what was then considered the earth's four elements – earth, fire, air and water, each of which had a related function in the body. For instance, there was your black bile, your yellow bile, blood and phlegm, each which affected specific organs like the spleen, liver, heart and brain, and produced the qualities of dry, cold, dry heat, moist heat and moist cold. And depending upon...."

"Would you please stop that!" my daughter suddenly interrupted me, obviously not the least bit interested in what I was talking about.

"But I thought you said you really enjoyed reading Galileo's Daughter?"

"Only the parts about being a nun," she explained.

"Really?" I said with surprise. "I never knew you were interested in the kinds of lives nuns led back in the Middle Ages."

"I think all girls at one time or another have thought about what it would be like to be a nun. I know I have."

'Prevailing treatment for the Black Death included bloodletting, crystals of arsenic applied to the wrists and temples, small sacks of precious stones laid over the heart, placing a quartered pigeon or a plucked rooster on the buboes. . .'

"Really?" I asked, surprised.

"Sure. But I'm afraid I could never have been one – especially back then."

"Why is that?" I asked with interest.

"Because I don't look good in brown."

Cut it into pieces (less than about 3') to fit inside your yard waste cart, or place the pieces next to the cart on your service day. Or take it to Whitey's Jolly Kone (1300 Jefferson Blvd.) between 9-3 on Sat., Jan. 7, where local Cub Scouts will help recycle the tree (donations accepted). Or take it to the county landfill for free drop-off, Monday-Saturday, 6:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. or Sunday 9-5 (call 530-666-8729 for info).

Wendy knows she must be stopped, even if it means sacrificing her newfound love to the Light -- and possibly herself as well.

"Lightbringer" creates a intriguing version of the afterlife, with unusual, unexpected details revealed slowly over the course of the story so that we are piecing the truth of this world together in much the same way Wendy is. Wendy's friends and family (especially her steadfast BFF Eddie) and Piotr's tribe of disparate allies are all drawn with distinct and engaging personalities, and the final pages set up the welcome possibility of a series.

The Yolo County Planning & Public Works, Division of Integrated Waste Management holds weekly collection of household hazardous waste (HHW) at the Yolo County Central Landfill (44090 County Road 28H), and will continue to be open during the holidays to better serve the residents of Yolo County. The HHW facility is open every Friday and Saturday, 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. including December 23, 24, 30 and 31. The landfill will observe the Christmas holiday on December 25 and New Year's Day on January 1.

The landfill also accepts hazardous waste from businesses in Yolo County that have products which are corrosive, reactive, toxic or ignitable. Businesses in the areas of construction, printing, equipment or vehicle maintenance, furniture refinishing and farms/ranches that create hazardous waste are encouraged to utilize this program. Business hazardous waste is accepted by appointment only and there is a fee for disposal. For more information about this program or to schedule an appointment, call (866) 714-8470.

Materials that will be accepted from the public and businesses include: batteries; fluorescent bulbs or tubes; used motor oil and filters; cleaning supplies; lighter fluid; antifreeze; aerosols; garden pesticides and herbicides; latex or oil based paints; solvents; poisons; electrical switches/relays; pilot light sensors; mercury thermostats and containerized syringes.

Yolo County also provides a reuse program which is open to the public during the same hours as the HHW collection program. The reuse program makes household cleaning supplies, lawn, garden and automotive products, and household paint available to residents at no charge. Often, products are dropped off at the HHW facility simply because they are no longer needed. These products have original labels and are nearly full.

HHW events are sponsored by the Yolo County Department of Planning & Public Works, Division of Integrated Waste Management. For more information on proper disposal of HHW, call (530) 666-8856 or visit: www.yolocounty.org.

GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Moneyball" (PG-13)-- The nuts and bolts of managing a baseball team might seem like a criminally dull topic, but in an admirable labor of love, Brad Pitt and director Bennet Miller turn it into a tale of challenging conventions and revolutionizing America's favorite pastime. Based on the story of Oakland A's manager Billy Beane (Pitt), "Moneyball" is a surprisingly funny and relentlessly engaging story of how somebody changed the game without setting foot on the field.

While the characters are talking about team budgets and player stats, Pitt and Jonah Hill (yes, he's a serious actor in this one) humanize the mathematics without getting in the way of the story. It's an underdog story without the cheese, and a true-life baseball story that you don't have to be a "SportsCenter" addict to appreciate.

"Killer Elite" (R) -- Jason Statham, Robert De Niro and Clive Owen serve up a gritty action flick with that magical mixture of thrilling and forgettable. Danny (Statham) is an ex-special forces kinda guy who teams up with his mentor, Hunter (De Niro) to take down Clive Owen's underground badguy society. That's as coherent as the plot gets -- or needs to be. For a no-brainer night of tough guys and explosions, "Killer Elite" is a decent action flick that won't disappoint, unless you want to see De Niro in anything more than an extended cameo.

"Boardwalk Empire: The Complete First Season" (TV-MA) -- If you haven't been watching or you don't subscribe to HBO, take this chance to check out this rich series. Set in Atlantic City at the onset of Prohibition, the show follows "Nucky" Thompson, the remorseless racketeer played by Steve Buscemi. "The Sopranos" is so 1990s, but it's not too late to jump on this worthwhile bandwagon.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"What's Your Number?" (R) -- Ally Darling (Anna Ferris) is a city girl with a ridiculous name who has had a string of ridiculous lovers. When she comes across a magazine article stating that single women are doomed to be alone if they haven't found The One after a certain number of relationships, Ally seizes the trite plot device and goes on a quest to see if any of her former beaus are actually the man she's meant to marry.

This is the most tragic comedy on the shelf, folks. A staggering amount of comedy talent is weighed down by the most inane, predictable, slapdash romcom script ever put together. Andy Samberg and Joel McHale are among the wasted funnymen in bit roles. Anna Ferris is the most tragic of all; she's charming, cute and funny, but just can't seem to find that special movie that will make it all happen.

Wendy has a lot on her plate. Her mom lingers in a coma, and Wendy's grieving family depends on her to keep the household running. Her grades are slipping, and her best friend is dropping some pretty big hints that he'd like to be more. And with all the responsibility for the family business falling on her shoulders, the last thing Wendy feels like doing is reaping the dead.

Wendy and her mother are the latest in a line of spiritual sentries who journey into the shadowy limbo dimension of the Never to help deceased spirits marooned there, guiding them -- shoving them if necessary -- forward into the mysterious Light. But lately Wendy has been neglecting her task, instead spending the nights scouring the Never for her mother's missing soul.

Then she meets Piotr. He is a Rider, a type of ghost who gathers and protects the vulnerable souls of the Lost, children thrown too soon into the dangerous Never. For more than harmless shades roam this place -- the monstrous Walkers, and the mysterious White Lady who controls them, are ever eager to score themselves a hit of potent Lost essence.

As Wendy finds herself falling more and more for the noble Piotr, she is torn between her duty and her heart. But the White Lady is growing stronger, and

Pear-ings

At our house, my husband does the weekly grocery shopping, and I shop for dinner parties and holiday meals. He called me to ask about buying some beautiful Red Bartlett pears, as we usually purchase green pears. Red Bartletts are among the first pears ready for harvest each season. The Red Bartlett pear carries a true "pyriform" (pear shape) -- a rounded bell on the bottom half of the fruit, then a definitive shoulder with a smaller neck or stem end. Gentle harvesting methods, including handpicking, and modern packing facilities in the Pacific northwest ensure a quality selection when fruit arrives in grocery produce departments.

Northwest pears are harvested when mature, but not yet ripe, so you can expect a smoother texture with sweeter flavor. If left at room temperature, they slowly reach sweet and succulent maturity as they ripen from the inside out.

Pears have been recognized as one of the 20 most popular fruits by the Food and Drug Administration, and it's no wonder why! They are an excellent source of fiber and a good source of vitamin C with only 100 calories per serving. And they're sodium-free, fat-free and cholesterol-free. As tempting as the pear might be right from the grocer's stand, a little bit of patience and know-how will ensure that it reaches peak flavor. The best way to judge ripeness for non-Bartlett varieties is apply gentle pressure to the neck of the pear with your thumb. If it yields to pressure, it's ripe.

To ripen your pears, leave firm, unripe pears at room temperature. Once the pear is ripe, it can be refrigerated to slow the ripening process and saved for use up to five days later.

Ripened pears can be used at once or put under refrigeration (35 F to 45 F) until you want to use them. Refrigeration will delay further ripening but will not stop it altogether, giving you adequate time to include fresh pears in your menu planning. Remember, pears need to ripen at room temperature, so don't refrigerate an unripe pear!

Placing under-ripe pears in a fruit bowl at room temperature near other ripening fruit like apples and bananas, which naturally give off ethylene, will help speed up the ripening process. And if you find yourself with a few too many overripe pears, blend them into smoothies, soups, sauces and purees!

Thoroughly wash pears immediately prior to eating or preparation. Under cold, drinkable water, use your clean hands or a soft-bristled produce scrub brush to gently but vigorously scrub the entire exterior of the pear, taking extra care to cleanse the indentations near the stem (at the top) and calyx (at the bottom). The total process will take 15 to 20 seconds. Wash fruit even if you plan on peeling it.

Pears are perfect when paired with sweet or savory dishes. This recipe for Balsamic-Fig and Pear Glazed Chicken Breasts blends sweet, fresh pears with rich aged balsamic vinegar and dried figs for a delightfully savory dinner meal.

BALSAMIC FIG AND PEAR-GLAZED CHICKEN BREASTS

4 ounces goat cheese or Feta cheese
3/4 teaspoon dried thyme or poultry seasoning
1/4 teaspoon fresh minced garlic
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon ground black pepper
4 USA Pears, cored and cut in half
1 1/3 cup low-sodium chicken broth
1 1/2 cup dried figs
3/4 cup balsamic vinegar
1/4 cup sugar
6 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves

1. Preheat oven to 375 F.
2. Mix goat or Feta cheese, thyme or poultry seasoning, garlic, 1 teaspoon of the salt and 1/2 teaspoon of the black pepper until blended. Place 1 rounded tablespoon of the cheese mixture into center of 6 of the pear halves.
3. Puree the remaining 2 pear halves, chicken broth, figs, vinegar and sugar in batches in blender until smooth. Pour into a strainer set over a bowl. Press liquid (sauce) into a bowl and discard solids. Pour half of the pear and fig sauce into a 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan.

4. Place chicken breasts over the pear and fig sauce in pan. Sprinkle with remaining 1 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon pepper. Place a filled pear half cut-side down over each chicken breast and drizzle with remaining sauce. Cover pan with foil and bake in oven for 20 minutes.

5. Remove foil and continue to bake, basting occasionally with the sauce, 30 to 40 minutes until chicken breasts reach an internal temperature of 160 F. Cut pear and chicken breast in half to display cheese filling. Spoon sauce over pears and serve. Serves 6.
